Reference: Inquiry regarding attorney misconduct

Dear Jack:

Attached are three sets of court documents regarding sanctions against three separate law firms and one or more attorneys for those firms. All appear to be licensed and resident in the state of Florida.

These are just examples of what I have come across regarding behavior that a judge felt warranted sanctions. I do think it would be important for a consumer, in need of attorney representation, to have access to information regarding dishonest behavior of attorneys. Of course, it could also be that such attorneys should not be allowed to practice law at all, at least until they are proven to be worthy of doing so. I'm not qualified to answer that question, however, but do believe the public deserves to know the information and be provided reasonable access to it.

Thanks for anything you can do and I apologize for any inconvenience this may cause you or the Bar Association.

Feel free to call me if it's more convenient.

Sincerely,

Scott Johnson, AAI, CAE
